UH televising free football home games this season, ending pay-per-view

By Stephen Tsai

Aug. 12, 2025

GEORGE F. LEE / GLEE@STARADVERTISER.COM

Officials at the University of Hawaii announced Monday at a news conference that in a television deal with Spectrum, home games would be broadcast free to Hawaii viewers. Football coach Timmy Chang, left, Athletic Director Matt Elliott, seated at center, and UH President Wendy Hensel spoke on the topic.

It will be “Saturday Night Live” for University of Hawaii television viewers this football season.

On Monday, UH and Spectrum Sports announced an agreement on a one-year deal in which the pay-per-view format of the past 22 years will be scrapped. Instead, six UH home football games and a road contest at Colorado State that will not be shown on national television will be available live and at no additional cost to Spectrum TV and Hawaiian Telcom customers.

"We believe this is an investment in the community, this is an investment in our people," UH Athletic Director Matt Elliott said. "And it's about making our games accessible to everyone. No matter what island you live on, no matter where you are (in Hawaii), you can see our games."

Those seven games also are expected to be made available to viewers on the continent on the Spectrum app.

The intent of the deal is threefold. Coach Timmy Chang said he expects recruiting to improve with increased exposure for the Warriors. Higher ratings will be used in determining future rights fees for the UH sports. And the arrangement is not expected to have a significant financial impact to Spectrum, which produces the sportscasts, or UH.

Under the terms of the contract that expired at the end of the 2024-25 academic year in June, Spectrum paid up to $3.2 million annually for the TV rights. The payout was lowered if Spectrum did not have at least seven games available for pay-per-view telecasts.

Spectrum can recoup the lost PPV revenue with a smaller rights payments to UH, as well as enhanced advertising value because of the increased viewership.

As a football-only member of the Mountain West, UH was allowed to keep its Spectrum checks in exchange for not receiving an equal share of the conference's revenue from national TV deals. The Mountain West is expected to compensate UH for the difference between this year's rights fee from Spectrum and the average national-TV payout to the other conference teams.

"We don't know what that (compensation) total is going to be yet," Elliott said.

Through the 2001 season, KFVE showed delayed telecasts of UH's home football games. The next year, UH, KFVE and Oceanic Cablevision (Spectrum's predecessor) implemented the pay-per-view format. Viewers on Oahu were charged $12.95 per game, while neighbor-island viewers paid $5 per game. UH received 70% of the pay-per-view fees on the first $1 million. KFVE produced the games, and Oceanic was used as the carrier. At the time, KFVE paid $700,000 annually for the TV rights to UH sports.

Last year, Spectrum and Hawaii Telcom charged $299.99 for a six-game, pay-per-view package. Individual games were priced at $69.99. The telecasts were available on the continent on cellphones and tablets through the Spectrum app. A geo-block was used to prohibit non-PPV subscribers from accessing the live telecasts in Hawaii. Free replays of the PPV telecasts were available the Sunday after games.

Spectrum and UH had been negotiating a one-year renewal for the 2025-26 academic year. Those discussions did not address beyond June 30, 2026, because the Mountain West is seeking to secure multiyear national television contracts that begin next summer. Fifteen other UH sports are moving from the Big West Conference to join the football Warriors in the Mountain West next year.

Elliott said negotiations on the gap year were "close to the finish line" when he started his UH appointment on June 30.

"I just wanted to ask the question," said Elliott, a reference to the possibility of dropping pay-per-view. "We've got this strange one-year opportunity. What are all of our possible options? We look at those, and line them up against each other, and see what makes the most sense for us. That's where we've been going back and forth pretty much since the day I got here. What are those options, and can we actually execute them in the short term?"

According to Elliott, it was agreed that "pay-per-view will not be part of anything going forward. That's not where we're moving in sports and in television."

By dropping PPV, UH will meet the Mountain West's request of making its sportscasts available on the conference's website.

Elliott said there also is a possibility of simulcasts of two UH sporting events — one through Spectrum, the other produced by the school and shown on its website.

"It's kind of a small platform in this first year, but if we can at least be able to train ourselves to be able to (produce content), it would help a lot," Elliott said.

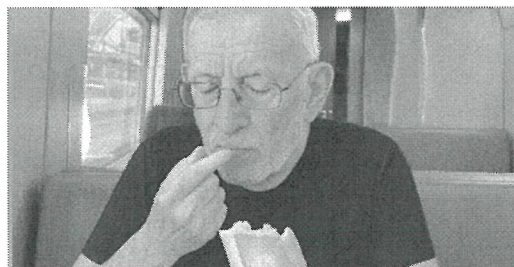

Of offering telecasts live and at no additional cost, UH President Wendy Hensel said, "This is a reflection, not just of football, but our values. That we care to engage with the community, be as open as we possibly can, and invite everyone out to the University of Hawaii."
